Digital Detox with Dr. Frederica Hendricks-Noble
If you’ve ever entered a room and witnessed every single person looking at his or her phone, you might feel ready for a digital detox. Setting boundaries around electronic communication is not just a good idea, it is also essential for productivity. Setting limits on time spent on social media can help improve both mood and motivation. Looking up from our cell phones is crucial to connecting with others, and this session will help you establish healthy parameters for a very modern workplace problem.

Avoiding Burnout with Dr. Shana Garrett
The condition of burnout has emerged as a serious trend in today’s workplace. Being stressed out has progressed from a general dissatisfaction with your daily activities to changes in your habits and attitudes that can impact your career. By examining the biological, psychological, and motivational factors that contribute to burnout, this presentation will offer strategies to reduce stress and replenish your personal resources.

Strategies for Conflict Management with Dr. Barbara Bailey
Collaborative workplaces are productive and healthy. Join an experienced contract mediator for a critical conversation about the essential conflict management techniques and skills to improve communication. Conflict can be constructive if it is managed properly! In this session, find out how you can turn workplace turmoil into the foundation for organizational health.
